† 15-point average only applied to students who completed at least 150 unique activities, with a minimum of 10 full-length practice exams. The unique activities include the full-length practice exams, high-yield assessments, post-session assessments, mastery assignments, section tests, and LSAT Channel episodes. A recent study conducted by Kaplan showed that students who completed a minimum of this work saw an average score improvement of 15 points from their first official Law School Admission Test® (LSAT) PrepTest practice exam to their highest practice exam. Students who started with lower scores saw greater increases. Students who completed fewer practice questions or study activities, or who did not engage in the full program, saw lower score increases.
